Ubaldo L. 5.0 out of 5 stars Pasting together several comments that appeared online, I learned the following. 1 The machine will spontaneously go into regular sleep mode when not in use. This saves energy. In regular sleep mode the machine will wake up and received faxes normally. This mode saves more power than regular sleep mode. However, the machine in deep sleep mode will only wake up and become able to receive faxes if a one physically touches a key, b one lifts the handset, or c if it received data from a computer or network. This will only happen if the fax machine is used as a printer, attached to a computer or a network.

So, if one wants to use it as a standalone fax machine or one wants to receive faxes at all times, the deep sleep mode needs to be turned off. This is not an intuitive project. To turn off the Deep Sleep mode you need to do the following Press Menu. With the up and down arrows select 1. General Setup, press OK. Select 4. Ecology, press OK. Select 2. Sleep Time, press OK. The Deep Sleep menu will appear. You can then choose yes or no with the up and down arrows. As much as the deep sleep mode is ecologically friendly, it remains incomprehensible why Brother made the access to controlling the Deep Sleep mode so hidden and arcane. The machine makes excellent copies and is a great printer. As to durability and cost of maintenance, remains to be seen. Once I unboxed the unit, I used masking tape to cover the black areas and any open electronics. Using a simple flat black can of spray paint, I was able to make it all black. Nobody can tell it was painted even when I point it out to them. First problem fixed. I have had the unit for about 7 months and it has performed flawlessly. It even uses the same toner as a wireless Brother printer I have which is a bonus as well. This past week of course, I encountered the DEEP SLEEP curse that so many people speak of. The machine will do half a ring and act weird, but will not receive faxes. After some research and playing around, there is a solution, even though Brother has decided to hide the feature. You ARE able to disable DEEP SLEEP. Go to General Settings, Ecology, Sleep Mode. When it asks you to change the time before sleep, simultaneously press the START and DOWN ARROW buttons. You will now get the hidden option to Disable DEEP SLEEP mode. Disable it and enjoy your fax for many years to come. Very disappointing. Second there is no way to copy anything other than single pages, e.g., copies of book pages, as you cannot lift the top exposing the palette.

This machine has caused complete stress and it certainly has not made our everyday office chores any easier. Because it continually malfunctions, I drove into town yesterday to another business in order to use their fax machine. We have tolerated this nonsense since we purchased it should have returned it within the time stated. Now apparently it is too late and we lost our option to return this equipment. Lastly, the toner cartridges are tremendously expensive and when it needs to be NEAR replacement, it will NOT allow you to fax!!!! If I could rate in the minus numbers I would!!!! Likewise its the 2nd time that Im getting paper size mismatch errors. Called brother and they are literally impossible to deal with. Buyer beware, its a cheap unit with absolutely no support. If you need brother for anything they hassle you to death, and by the time anything gets decided they just cancel the ticket out of the system. And so far this one is working really good, the print quality is really good, much better than my previous fax machine and it prints fairly fast, 2.5 seconds per page. It was fairly easy to hook up and only took a few minutes for me to have it up and running and this was with a few telephone interruptions Also while it does come with everything that you need to get started youre probably going to want to order an extra toner cartridge right away, the one that comes with it is only a starter and if you receive a lot of faxes you might just find yourself without any toner. Ill update this review after Ive had more time to use the printer. Paper jams, memory issues, feeder issues, scanning issues, trust issues!!! For 7 years I have suffered. So I decided to take the plunge on new fax machine. Honestly 99.9% of the faxes I receive are junk mail but once a week I get something that is actually business related and for that reason I have to have a functioning fax machine.

This thing is big, bulky and looks like it should do a lot more than it does but it operates with the simple efficiency of a peanut butter and jelly sandwich. If you need a new fax machine and don't want one of those all in one jobs, this is your guy. So why is it being sold in Canada, with written in fine print in the user manual that that feature not available? If I knew that I could have purchased an HP all in one and have PCfax capability instead of purchasing a Brother FAX2840 machine deceptively showing it to be a dedicated fax when it is a printer with fax capabilities, to allow brother to dump them in Canada.
