Sake was already a beloved Kobe product due to the advantageous natural environment, and after the Port of Kobe was opened, culinary culture brought from European nations flowered, and everyday people became enthusiastic about Western gourmet.

Now, Kobe is a city beloved by gourmets for its bread, Western sweets, and Kobe beef, the prized Japanese beef brand.

SAKE (Nadagogo)

Nada Gogowas a suitable locale for high-quality sake production because Yamada Nishiki rice appropriate for sake-making was grown in the nearby Banshu Plains, and because it was blessed with good water called "Miyamizu". Now it is the best-renowned sake-producing district in Japan, and "Nada no Sake" is beloved nationwide.

KOBE SWEETS

Western sweets were first made in Kobe for residents of the foreign settlements, saloons, and travelers. In 1897, a Japanese opened a Western sweets shop in Motomachi. Kobe artisans innovated on the advanced techniques brought by foreign pâtisseries, and Western sweets shops opened in Kobe one after another.

COFFEE

Import of coffee, a necessary item for Westerners, began with the opening of the Port of Kobe, and a roasting industry gradually developed. In 1878, a coffee house appeared in the international Motomachi neighborhood.

BREAD

Bakeries already existed in the late 19th century because many foreigners lived in Kobe, similar to sweets and coffee. Kobe's bread consumption volume is top-level nationwide, and delicious bakeries are dotted throughout the city.

Beef
THE FINEST BEEF
IN THE WORLD

Welcome to the World of Kobe Beef

1 CLASSIFICATION

No cow comes into this world and begins its life as Kobe Beef. Even among "Tajima-gyu" cows, only the chosen few that satisfy specific quality criteria deserve the title "Kobe Beef."

2 ORIGIN

What affects the meat quality of beef above all else is its lineage. Tajima-gyu cows originally came from Tajima, a mountainous region with few open fields facing the Sea of Japan. Tajima-gyu is regarded as the pinnacle of even the Japanese Black domestic breeds of Wagyu cattle of which only a few now exist, and is used as the "motoushi" or purebred seedstock cattle in the breeding of Wagyu cattle nationwide.

3 FLAVOR

The deliciousness of Kobe Beef is also scientifically proved. This fine, delicate meat has a high degree of fat marbling that melts at low temperatures. This meat has tender fibers and its own, unique refined sweetness. Flavor components
Kobe beef is rich in oleic acids which determine the taste of fat and the flavor component inosinic acid.
