Instructions for the FAULHABER
Goose Call (GANS)

FAULHABER WILDLOCKER
Waltenhofengasse 3/3/3005, 1100 Wien, ÖSTERREICH
Tel.: +43 (0) 676 76 49 222
E-Mail: office@wildlocker.at
Online Shop: www.wildlocker.at

The FAULHABER-Goose Call is designed to give two distinct and important sounds. The first is a lower pitch “guzzle”, the second a higher pitch “honk”. It is the quick control of the break between the two combined sounds that is most important, not allowing a slow sluggish slide from guzzle to honk, but instead a quick sharp break with the sound “her-onk”. The control of the break is made with the diaphragm, an outward puff from the belly like grunting. Care must be taken not to be sloppy at the end of the call. Don´t release an extra puff of air at the end of the call to create the sound “her-onk-ER”. This extra third syllable makes a normal call into an alarm call which will send the geese flying the other direction.

Application:
The best time to call geese is in fog, when the geese cannot find their way, or when small groups are detached from the main skein. Calling at large skeins is only useful to attract attention to decoys, but sometimes a few calls will cause one bird at the end of the line to turn and fly over you.

In conjunction with decoys:
With proper placement and number of decoys it is important to give the illusion the decoys are conversing and feeding – so interchange the shout of the “honk”, and the content feeding “guzzle” to complete the lure.
Flying geese expect to converse with birds on the ground and a silent group of geese transgresses nature´s law.

The FAULHABER Goose Call is specially designed to imitate the cackle of geese with a good carrying power. Naturally, the guzzle and honk from a distance sounds much softer to the human ears than up close. Often hunters mistake the calls they hear from 30 or more yards to be soft purring when up close it is a hard cackle or chatter. Distance “outdoor” acoustics are as important to the imitation as the pitch of the call. Don’t be afraid to use the instrument to its full benefit

Good sport!

FAULHABER WILDLOCKER
Waltenhofengasse 3/3/3005, 1100 Wien, ÖSTERREICH
Tel.: +43 (0) 676 76 49 222
E-Mail: office@wildlocker.at
Online Shop: www.wildlocker.at